The main portion of the structure was sawed into three parts. Chains were attached to it and the engine. The engine was started up the trail and north side residents were aroused from their slumbers by the crash.

Short Story

The Beton Experiment

By MARTHA McCULLOCH-WILLIAMS

Copyright, 1913, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

The lane was enticing—a long arch of green and gold, checkered here or there by a blur of May sunshine, marking a gap in the trees on either side. Lacy shadows lay upon the beaten roadway; it was clean and brown, thereby proclaiming the recent fall of rain.

Melville reined in as he came fully within its green coolness. He had been riding hard since breakfast—though the day was still young it was very warm and still. Melville glanced at his reeking horse with something of compunction. He had not meant to use the beast so hard, but once under the spell of swift motion, had let the good creature over spend itself.

"Go on! At a walk! Don't you know anything about cooling out?" somebody called from the hedge-row's ambush.

Melville started, looking all about. The horse stood droop-headed and panting—he had not dreamed it was so blown. He sprang down and led it two paces forward, then said anxiously: "I don't know the first thing about 'cooling out.' Please come and tell me—whoever and wherever you are."

"No need. I can tell you here. Just keep walking your horse up and down—slowly—until the sweat begins to dry. Then mount and ride him a wee bit faster until he is full dry. And then rub him down, let him have a little water—after that it don't hurt him to crop a little grass."

"But—I have not time. I must be in Exeter by 10 o'clock," Melville protested. "Is there nobody around—no place where I can leave him and get a fresh horse?"

"What you deserve is a motor cycle. If you override that it gets back at you by throwing you," the unseen critic answered severely. "I won't tell you where to get a horse—you know so little what to do with one."

"Then I must go and look for my self," Melville countered. "Mean-time, I wish I dared turn this poor creature on somebody's grass."

"Is he yours?" the voice interrupted.

Melville nodded, saying, "I bought him yesterday on purpose for this ride."

"Will you sell him," the voice again demanded.

Melville shook his head, answering, "I'll give him to anybody that will take care of him properly—and tell me how I may be in Exeter on time."

"You aren't afraid of motors?" the cross examiner asked.

Melville laughed significantly. "The bug of one would be sweeter than angel voices to me about now," he said. "But I was told there was only one in the county—and it was not to be had for love nor money."

"Truth, for a wonder," the voice continued. "There was a surging of hedgerow greenery—it parted finally letting, through a figure puzzlingly nondescript. It was swathed in a long khaki garment something like a Russian cap, but so cut as not to impede motion. A high collar hid the throat, a slouch hat pulled low masked the face above it. Below were puttees and small, very feminine feet, rather delicately shod.

"So! You come to my relief! The lady of the auto? Otherwise Miss Beton?" Melville said, recalling the gossip of the country town, heard while he was horse buying.

"Again you speak truth! Wonders will never cease," it said, then lifting the hat a trifle, "I dare say you think I shall take you and your horse at your word. I'm fond of surprises, especially when they disconcert the other fellow. Come on! Lead your horse. I will see that he is cared for properly and returned to you or your agent, in good fettle. My charge will be henceforth consideration on your part for any horse you may ride. And in reward you shall get to Exeter."

He followed her obediently to one of the sun blurs. It resolved itself into an open gate, giving upon a lush pasture, beyond which a group of buildings showed queer and quaint in the sunshine. At his guide's "halloo," men came in view. In a trice they had relieved him of the horse, now limping as well as drooping his head; a breath later there was an odd looking ancient runabout making wheezy noises under the padlock gate. His guide had disappeared, after a few brief orders to the men. She came back equipped with goggles, a thick motor coat, heavy gloves and a very rakish cap.

"In full gussied outfit," she said airily, glancing down at herself. "So-called, because it keeps the gossips guessing whether I myself am driving the car—or letting George do it."

"Your chauffeur?" Melville asked.

"Surely they didn't miss telling you about George?" Mary Beton said, motioning him to a seat in the car.

As he settled himself he answered with a puzzled sigh, "They surely did. Now why?"

"Can't say, unless to prove the days of miracles are not wholly past," Miss Beton answered with a touch of bitterness. "There is something supernatural in gossip holding its tongue—to a rank stranger who is in virgin territory. Because of the tongue holding I will tell you things to make you understand other things. You have heard I am a terror, a mad woman, caring nothing for Mrs. Grundy. A jingo a schemer utterly godless. Oh, I know my character—when my friends (?) are through with it.

The truth is, I am trying my best to save a mind—and lose a fortune."

There was a tinkle of appeal in her voice though she had spoken evenly. Melville involuntarily laid his hand upon her gloves one, saying, "Tell me about it. Everything. Maybe I can help."

"Any real man can help," the girl said, very low. "You see George is my cousin—also my step brother. My mother, a widow, married my father's brother—I think it was a sort of family economy—Uncle Lenox knew he had to take care of us. George is just my age. He was the handsomest fine lad. Overstudy brought on an illness. It left him wholly emaciated and decrepit, almost like an old man. Then my mother died, a little later his father. And by the will, George and his fortune are left to me in trust. If he comes to himself he has everything except an annuity of five hundred dollars that is mine in any event. So—I brought him here to the old Beton place—and have been trying for three years to re-create a human being. He has improved physically. You will go far to find a man more perfect. But he has still the mind of a child—a baby indeed. He fears people piteously, so we live altogether to ourselves. The doctors say he has almost no chance of mental recovery—that is why I have taken such desperate chances."

"What chances?" Melville asked.

"She looked at the whirling wheels. "Running this car," she said. "I believe a shock—only that—will ever shatter the torpor that holds him. But don't think I let him take risks alone—I am always with him."

"You love him!" Melville said.

"He—he was mad about me—he fore the trouble came. We were too close for this sort of thing. He was like a brother—but because of his feeling—" she stopped looking at him rather helplessly.

Melville touched her shoulder, saying softly, "Go on."

She shrank from his touch, choking out, "I—see—George will see us—together—he is out on the road driving with the head groom. I—thought—maybe—if you would—seem affectionate—that sort of shock."

"I understand," Melville said with a deep breath. The car was slowing down—in front he caught the burr of lighter wheels approaching. As they came almost to a stop a light vehicle drawn by a splendid span came toward them. Mary Beton gave him an appealing look. Instantly his arms were around her; he snatched off her cap and buried his lips in the soft hair it had hidden.

From in front there came a wild, half articulate, half animal cry; a figure leapt and lithe leaped from the wagonette and launched itself at the pair in the car. "Mary! Mary!" it panted hoarsely. "You—you must not—you are mine—only mine!"

Then, with a great, sobbing cry, the lean figure reeled. Mary knelt beside it, cradling the head on her breast. In a minute the eyes opened. No longer were they vacant, but filled with the light of reason.

"Have we had a spill, Polly?" he asked, sitting up. Then, at sight of Melville, things came back to him. He got unsteadily to his feet, saying with a fine gentleman's finest voice: "Since I found you kissing my cousin you will have to marry her."

"With pleasure," Melville said, smiling.

Mary gave him a grateful look. She thought he was but humoring a sick man's mind. But a year later she knew he had spoken the truth—for George Sully himself gave her away, the happiest and most beautiful bride ever carried home by a Melville.

IGNORES CHANCE'S KICK

CHICAGO, July 21.—President Ban Johnson of the American league, expected to issue an official statement today declaring that the league cannot take cognizance of the protest made by Manager Frank Chance of the Highlanders over the deal that gave Hal Chase to the White Sox in exchange for infielders Borton and Zeider.

Superintendent Nash and Mr. Crowley of the Northwestern Railroad company were in the village Wednesday with plans for the removal of the depot. Mr. Nash's plans call for removing the depot east of its present location toward the hand car house, with the side track running behind the depot from a point near the creamery to a point east of the hand car house. Mr. Nash will turn the matter over to the land department and they will take it up with the village council, and the work of removal will probably be begun next fall.

Miss Fay Vaughan departed Tuesday for an extended visit with her sister, Mrs. Edwards at Jersey City, N. J.

Mrs. Lee Giffillan and daughter Marjory are visiting relatives at Minneapolis.

The local baseball team played on the home grounds with the Tomah nine Sunday afternoon. The locals put up a poor game, piling up error upon error and were unable to get a single man across the pan. The score was 6 to 0 in favor of Tomah.

S. S. S. Drives the Demon of Bad Blood Back to the Woods.

The under layer of skin is a fine network of tiny blood vessels in which the famous blood remedy, S. S. S., works with remarkable activity. This is why S. S. S., the best known blood purifier, has such a positive action in the skin. There is one ingredient in S. S. S. which peculiarly stimulates cellular or glandular activity to select from the blood or from this fine network of blood vessels in the skin, those elements which it requires for regeneration.

Thus, pimples, acne, eczema, lupus, or any other blood condition that attacks the skin or seeks an outlet through the skin, is met with the antidotal effect of S. S. S.

Under the influence of S. S. S. this fine network of blood vessels in the skin is constantly taking from the blood the nutrition required for healthy tissue, and the cause of disease is just as constantly becoming removed, scattered and rendered harmless. These facts are more fully explained in a book on skin troubles sent by The Swift Specific Co., 190 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores. Get a bottle to-day and banish all skin afflictions.

Daddy's Bedtime

The Story

Of An

Evening Star.

Galileo Studied With a Telescope.

UP in the sky a little white star came sparkling out.

"There is the little star that shines into my window every night," Evelyn said.

"Yes, and it shines into my window, too," Jack added. "Twinkle, twinkle, little star; how I wonder what you are!"

"That is not a little star," daddy said. "That is a world, a great big one, many times bigger than our earth, and it goes swinging around the sun just as we do. The name of your little star is Jupiter. The reason Jupiter looks so small to us is because it is so far away. The fastest express train, you know, travels about seventy miles an hour. Now, if there was an express train to Jupiter, traveling every single minute of the time, it would take you over 500 years to get there. That is a longer trip than any human being is likely to have, for there are few persons who live to be even a hundred.

"It would take one 300 years at least to reach Jupiter going by the fastest flying machines we now have.

"I don't believe the trip would be worth while anyway as a pleasure excursion. You see, wise men tell us that nobody can live there because it is too hot. They think that down under the layer of clouds that covers Jupiter all the time, so that they cannot get a good peek at it with their telescopes, this world is still red-hot, not quite so hot as the sun, but just beginning to cool off so that it is not comfortable for birds and fishes and animals and human beings to live on.

"When the time comes for little boys and girls to live there it is nice to think that they will not have to go to bed in the dark. Why? Because with five moons such as Jupiter has it is always a lovely moonlight.

"At first people did not know that Jupiter had moons. It was Galileo, the great star gazer, who found it out when he made a telescope.

"When he told his friends about the moons of Jupiter they laughed at him, but one by one as they took a peek through his telescope they agreed with him.

"There was one very obstinate fellow who had been studying the stars all his life and thought that he knew just as much as Galileo. He didn't study with a telescope and see things with his own eyes as Galileo did because he did not approve of new fashioned things. He thought old ways were best. He hinted that Galileo saw the moons through his telescope because the telescope was wrong, not the old books from which he studied about the stars.

"One day this obstinate old man died. Galileo spoke of him very kindly, but he could not help saying with a little smile:

"I hope at last he saw the moons on his way to heaven."

I, Frank H. Burgess, business do solemnly swear that the actual ing the month of June, 1913, was as about stated.*Frank H. Burgess*Subscribed and sworn to before me this 1st day of July, 1913.A. E. BLEEKMAN, Notary Public.WALL STREET PRAISES OUR BADGER ACCOUNTINGIn an editorial which criticizes the South Carolina state treasurer's annual report as a "vacuum," and which in comparison with it condemns the more expensive and equally worthless reports in states that "print hundreds of pages of irrelevant details, with imposing titles and covers," the Wall Street Journal says:"It has been the duty of this newspaper to analyze a number of the reports of the treasurers and comptrollers of the various states of the union. That of Wisconsin was among the best. That of Washington state was so bad that a frank criticism, published in these columns, prevented the re-election of the governor, where the rest of the state ticket was successful."We can imagine no higher compliment for a fiscal report than the assertion of the economic-thinking "Journal" that it is "among the best," especially in view of the fact that no other report was mentioned as "among the best." Think of the radical and progressive Wisconsin winning laurels for meanness and substantial accuracy in things financial from the best of the Wall street publications!EDUCATION IN GERMANY"The average man of the people in America is much more interested in the affairs of the public school than the average man in Germany," declares Dr. George Kerschensteiner, a well known German educator, in "A comparison of Public Education in Germany and the United States," issued by the Bureau of Education. "In the daily press, reports and discussions on educational topics occupy a space which to my observations is fully ten times that which German newspapers devote to the same subject."Dr. Kerschensteiner compares point by point the school systems in the two countries. He shows how Germany secures educational efficiency by centralization of authority within the individual states. He admits that possibly centralization has gone even further than is desirable

In Germany, but is equally positive that there is not enough centralization within the individual states of this country. As a result of the lack of state compulsion, he says, "We see today in the United States the sharpest contrasts between school systems that are incredibly poor and others of the highest possible type that would do credit to the finest civilized nations of the globe." He finds that American citizens of a community have more direct control over their schools than in Germany and commends this condition.

Direct election of school board members by the citizens, as found in the United States, impressed Dr.
Kerschensteiner very favorably. He notes that in Germany the citizens have little or nothing to say about their school system. "In Germany the local school boards are nowhere chosen by popular vote," he declares.
He thinks the American plan might be a very good thing for his own country particularly as a means of arousing genuine public interest in education.

The American high school comes in for some interesting comment by the doctor, both complimentary and otherwise. He praises the high school's democratic spirit, its aim to educate all the people; but he misses the thoroughness that characterizes the work of the German gymnasiums.

In both nations the schools are now in a period of great development, according to the Munich educator. "The great advantage that Germany possesses," he declares, "in addition to the relentless thoroughness of the whole educational work, is the well regulated organization of a state-provided school system, which requires in each community a school as good as that in every other community. But this advantage has been purchased at the expense of many qualities for which we must envy the American schools."

BUSINESS MEN ARE NOT HELD TO BLAME

While the insurance suit relating to the West Salem fire involves the business men of that village, technically, there is no allegation of responsibility on their part. The complaint lays the blame upon the railroad, and the citizens are made parties because they have already collected the insurance. Should the insurance company win, they would have recourse against the railroad company, which is charged with negligence resulting in the fire. It is unfortunate that the citizens, on top of what they already have suffered, must be put to the annoyance of litigation, but it is at least gratifying to know that, should the suit be won, they would still be reimbursed for the fire loss. The suit is interesting in that it will lay down a rule as to the degree of precaution that must be taken by railroads in guarding against the starting of fires along the right of way.

GETTING AT OUR RIGHT NAMES

Perhaps the attention of Colonel Roosevelt may have been attracted by this portion of Colonel Mulhall's testimony:

"I met Beveridge two or three times at the Columbia club in Indianapolis. He knew Parry well. I saw him throw his arms around Parry and say he was the man who sent him to the United States senate."

There are plenty of thoroughgoing progressives in the bull moose party, but the tendency of the new-party opportunity to invite the allegiance of "lame ducks" has been illustrated in the case of Mr. Beveridge. Colonel Mulhall's disclosures should definitely fix the status of the down-and-out senator in American politics. Can it be wondered that such as he preferred the impulsive and unsystematic Roosevelt to Senator La Follette?

It is the opinion of Chicago suf-fragists that women policemen must be husky and have nerve. We have seen a number of little women who had plenty of nerve without making the scales fidgety with their huskiness.

Cards of pure gold have been used by a wealthy Russian nobleman at St. Petersburg for the celebration of his golden wedding. This man certainly must have a real feeling for his wife.

Swearing before children is to be deplored, but when a husband lets loose on account of his wife saving 3,000,000 tea coupons to get a piano, there is a plausible excuse.

Not to carry a scar from an appendicitis operation is getting to be just as unfashionable as a mole on the nose.

Next to being president the greatest ambition of some folks seems to be to cross the Atlantic in a 14 ft. boat.

The Fly on Tour

"Dear Colonel Bluebottle, how well you are looking!" "You're younger than ever, Miss Fly." And how is your papa?" "He's doing fine, thank you. He always gets fat in July."

We're living just now in a livery stable, it's pleasant and hot, but you know We travel a lot in the spring and the summer—we've so many places to go.

"We spent several days in a private hospital, but when all the patients got well We spent quite a while with the Orphanage babies, and then at a summer hotel."

We stayed for a week, but could not stand the cooking—the stable was fine, by the way.
But papa has found a new boarding house for us—we leave for the alley today.

"Come visit our stable; you'll like the fat horses, and just round the corner you'll find A place where they have a new baby you'll relish—the rubber tip ped milk bottle kind."

Well, I must be going; they're waiting for me at that butcher shop over there—
The meat is quite good, for the man always hangs it out where it will catch the fresh air, And he keeps his cheese and his pork and beef sausage right out on the counter to dry—You'd better come with me. Well, drop in and see us; be sure to dear Colonel; good-bye."

IN The WORLD
OF WOMEN

For the first time in its history the grand prix de Rome, the most coveted music prize in France, has been awarded to a woman. It has been awarded to Lilly Bouleauzer, the 19 year old daughter of an instructor at the Paris Conservatory for a composition entitled, "Faust and Helene." The prize was established in 1893.

Rhea Lyon, aged 14 years, is being heralded as the champion juvenile gardener of Cleveland. She has won more than 100 prizes and realized $300 from the sale of her products. She plans to become a teacher of agriculture.

The Prodigal Parent

Colonel Roosevelt, one evening in Marquette, told a group of newspaper correspondents a number of stories.

But if more of us were materially, but not mentally, like the Arkansas backwoodsman it would be well for the nation," said the colonel.

"Once, while traversing Arkansas, I dismounted at a log cabin and asked if I could have dinner. Yes, they said, I could, and while I waited on the bench before the door I noticed a baby playing with a loaded revolver."

"Goodness me," I said, "you shouldn't let that young infant play with a loaded revolver. What a terrible risk!"

"Resk?" said the backwoodsman.
"Aw, I dunno. I got 'bout fo'-teen mo' chillun round the place somewhere."

A certain Irishman living in New houses on the east side in the Jew-at his office to make a complaint.

"I tell you, Mister Murphy, I am going to leave your flat."

"Sure, now," answered Murphy.
"And what is the trouble?"

"Well, I tell you, dere's too many rats in dot flat. Vy, only yesterday I killed eight."

Murphy jumped to his feet in anger, and bellowed forth: "Aw, it's rats is it, that is bothering ye? You leave them rats alone! What do you want for $8 a month? Hunting privileges?"—Everybody's.

How Emma Irritates Sallie

George Fitch, writing about "Homeburg's Two Four-Hundredths" in the American Magazine, satirizes those in a small town who "put on airs." One of two families in Homeburg which feel superior is the Singer family. But Emma Madigan, who drives the milk route, is not particularly impressed with Sallie Singer, as the following extract shows:

"Emma Madigan weighs 200 pounds and drives a milk route. She went to high school with Sallie Singer, and it is the joy of her life to poke her head into the Singer home when Sallie has company and yell, "Sall, here's your milk!" But Sallie never tries to refrigerate her with the Spitzbergen glare which she uses on us collectively when she goes to the theater. You couldn't possibly refrigerate Emma, but you might encourage her to say more like the time when Sarah Payley passed her on the street without speaking, being busy treading the upper altitudes with a young Princeton college visitor, and Em yelled back, "For goodness' sakes, Sarey, if you didn't lace so tight you could get your chin down and see someone!"

TARIFF BILL DRIVES
FOSS TO CANADA

BOSTON, Mass.—Governor Foss of Massachusetts, who was among those mentioned for the democratic nomination for president, has announced that the B. F. Sturtevant Company, a machinery manufacturing plant controlled by him, with a plant in Massachusetts, has bought another in Galt, Ontario. The chief reason is the failure of the democratic majority in congress to provide in the new tariff bill for reciprocity with Canada. Other reasons are the power of the labor unions and the consequent difficulties with workmen, he says.

A MYSTERY
STORY OF
NEW YORK

By

"That was it—I was reaching for them last night—just as I was reaching for something the night I fell at Captain Hanks's door. And it brought everything back."

"Oh, what do you mean?" begged Betsy-Barbara. "Go on! Please go on."

"I had got to the head of the stairs on the night of the murder," said Tommy. "The gas was lighted in the hall. I was picked. You know how your mind gets on one little thing when you're picked—"

"I don't," put in Betsy-Barbara, in spite of her interest in the story —"but please go on."

"And I saw something bright in the hallway, close to Captain Hanks's door. I braced against a post and looked at it. It was a cluster of diamonds—the more I think of it, the more it seems like that shoe-buckle of yours. I was as sure of it as a man can be sure of anything when he's drunk. I reached out to get it. Then I tumbled and hit—the stuff. The tumble and the sticky feeling put diamonds out of my mind. Then it's curtains for mine until I'm in my own room—well, you know."

"And the funny thing," concluded Tommy, "is that I never remembered one thing about it, not even when the police were combing my very soul—until—what what happened last night. You can't be certain, of course. I was picked. But I'm sure, just the same, that I saw a bunch of diamonds or something beside that door. You've asked me to tell you anything I might find out about the Hanks case. And I'm telling, that's all."

Betsy-Barbara considered.
"It may not mean anything," she said, "and it may mean a good deal." She considered again. "Even if the diamonds were there, maybe it had nothing to do with our case.
If anybody had been robbed that night, if there had been any signs of a burglar, this evidence would be very important. But the police say that the house wasn't entered. Then again, what became of the diamonds? It seems no one else noticed them."

"Well," remarked Tommy North cynically, "there were a great many policemen in the house."

Betsy-Barbara walked on, still thinking. "Maybe, I'm afraid, though, that it might be only an aberration," she said finally.

"Perhaps," echoed Tommy North.
And now, having finished his introduction, he approached the subject nearest his heart.

"Of course, that's all," he said,
"except that I owe you an apology for—for my condition last night."
"It is yourself," said Betsy-Barbara, "that you owe the apology.
Mr. North, why did you do it—again?"

Now it was in Tommy North's impulses to tell exactly why he did it—to come out with the truth, accompanied by his opinion of philanderer Spaniards. But that would have amounted to a declaration; and to declare his feelings for Betsy-Barbara was leagues beyond his present courage.

"Oh," he said, carelessly, desperately, "I got a jolt. That's all.
And I took it out in booze."

"You've told me," said Betsy-Barbara, "that you don't like the taste of the stuff. That's why you drink, then—to console yourself when you're in trouble? Doesn't that show rather poor courage?"

"Perhaps."

"Now, I'm in trouble. And Constance—Mrs. Hanks—is in deep, deep trouble. Suppose we drank every time it hurt! I don't believe you know what real trouble is—even if you were arrested unjustly."

"Well, it isn't always that."

"No; you told me the other night it was because you hadn't anything better to do. Mr. North," she added, suddenly lifting her blue eyes to his, "your need is something else to do. You're out of a job. How many jobs have you had since you came to New York?"

By now they had crossed Twenty-eighth Street, and reached the whirl and glitter of morning on Fifth Avenue. Already the morning crowd of shoppers, women of the exclusive class who scorn the gayer but cheaper afternoon parade, debated before shop-windows or held social intercourse at corners. On the pavement the procession of coaches and motors was beginning. Already the stalwart, soldierly, traffic squad policemen were opening lanes for pedestrians with waves of their white-gloved hands. The windows, each an artistic creation, blossomed with the richest goods of the five continents. It was all alive, beautiful, and—most of all to the country observation of Betsy-Barbara—smart. It was made for the temptation of woman. As Tommy North talked, Betsy-Barbara's eye traveled to this lovely frock, that alluring window. Still, after the universal habit of her sex, she kept her mind on the main subject, in spite of these distractions of the eye. The inner part of her was listening and following. Yet the gay parade, the autumn touch in the air, obviously raised her spirits, obviously put her in a mood to regard Tommy's declarations tenderly, even humorously.

"I came here to find a great commercial career—as bill clerk in a produce house," he said. "That job lasted three months—as long as the concern did. Then I accepted a slight weekly emolument from a banker. At least, that was what he called himself. When I found that he was getting three hundred per cent from advances on salary, I

MISSION HOLDING SUMMER REVIVAL

A hot weather revival is on at the City Mission. Superintendent C. Dewey of the mission reports that last week was the best that he has had during the summer. Thirteen men and women came forward as the result of the work of the speakers that Mr. Dewey has had each night. Mr. Dewey has fitted the mission with electric fans, and has made it as comfortable as possible.

Tuesday night Rev. F. R. Weber, supply pastor of the English Lutheran church, will speak. If your church is closed on Wednesday night Mr. Dewey invites you to attend the mission. He will speak that night. Professor G. H. Bretnell of the normal school will speak on Thursday night. Other speakers have been arranged for the remaining nights.

and he utilized them for sleeping purposes. Neighbors in the vicinity of Second street complained to the

'HEFTY' BUT ACTIVE

SEA LIONS CUMBERSOME IN LOOKS BUT PROVE TO BE EXPERT JUGGLERS IN SHOW

An act of extraordinary interest with the Al. G. Barnes big three ring wild animal circus this year is Tom, Dick and Harry, trained sea lions.
These lions are the proteges of Capt.
Albert Stonwall, who for many years has been engaged in the capture, study and training of water animals and reptiles. Dick, one of the trio has been under the tutelage of the captain for nearly nine years, and now ranks as a real star actor.

Sea lions take the same rank in the ocean that the African lion does in the jungle. They are the kings of all water life, being able to outswim and outfight any other denizen of the briny deep.

The cumbersome in appearance, the sea lion is active and dexterous out of the water to a remarkable degree. For instance, Dick and his side-partner, Tom, are equilibrists, jugglers, musicians, ball players, and bare-back riders. The juggling of rubber and billiard balls on the tips of their noses seems to be done with the greatest ease. Throwing these balls from one to another and catching them by the same means is a part of their act. Doing this same stunt while riding galloping ponies, has given them the prominence of being the best trained sea lions known.

These lions are only one of the many features offered by the great Barnes show. Fifty entirely new acts are on the program this season. Over 350 trained animals take part in the entertainment.

Performances will be given here Wednesday, July 23 at 2 and 8 o'clock, and a mile long street parade at 10:30. The tents will be located at the Market street show grounds.

MILWAUKEE ROAD TAKES MATTERS INTO OWN HANDS

as the structure collapsed. Three short trips by the freight engine and the old highway was a heap of debris in the yards of the company. The cleaning up work followed and by noon all that remained were the approaches.

Evidence that the company is basing its right to act on the rate commission's order may be deduced from the fact that they refused to touch the approaches. Under the contract by which the bridge was built the company put up the main structure and the city the approaches.

Mayor Sorensen and Alderman Torrance reached the scene in time to see the finishing touches put on the work of demolition and were asked by Mr. O'Brien for permission to tear down the approaches. The city officials declined to reply, taking the stand that they should express no opinion or grant no rights until they had been fully informed on the legal phases of the situation.

Threatens Arrest

Alderman Robert Schulze of the Fifth ward was one of the citizens who grew indignant at the action of the company and threatened men in charge of the work with arrest. The result was a request to get off the company's right of way peaceably or be forcibly ejected, it is said.

The city attorney today refused to discuss the subject further than to say: "That the company officials felt the necessity of proceeding during the darkness of night is a reflection upon their motives that requires no comment."

He refused to discuss the legal phases of the incident.

Not Based on Commission Order

John Roemer of the Wisconsin rate commission, over long distance telephone to The Tribune, today denied absolutely that the action of the Milwaukee road was based upon any order of the commission other than that issued following the hearing on the matter held months ago.

"The first I knew of the company's action," he said, "was when informed by your city attorney. All I know about it is that the order which the commission issued is being held in abeyance pending a new proposition, submitted by your city engineer, Mr. Bradish, for a subway at Mill street."

Asked if there were to be any more hearings conducted by the commission at La Crosse, Mr. Roemer asserted that as far as the commission was concerned the matter was settled.

"We have held up our order for a while to give the various parties to the controversy an opportunity to get together. The only action to be made by us would be an O. K. of the subway plan in the event all of the parties agree to the proposition. We will hold no more hearings, however."

Following hearings here the city and railroad company were ordered by the railroad commission to build a new viaduct, the present structure being deemed unsafe and condemned.

Cost is Divided

Under the present ruling the railroad company pays for the structure over its right of way, the city pays for the approaches and the damage to adjacent property, while the street car company pays nothing in spite of the fact that they will probably run their tracks across the new bridge to avoid the Mill street crossing. The commission took the attitude that the expense of transferring their tracks from Mill to Rose street and relaying the paving of Mill street constituted the street car company's portion of the expense.

The question of grades at the approaches entered the controversy, the city assuming that the street car company could not run heavy cars up a six per cent grade. A four per cent grade would extend for more than a block each way, causing damage to fronting property to an extent estimated at more than $10,000.

Recalls Former Incident.

The action of the Milwaukee road in connection with the bridge recalls the story of how the Burlington line put down its tracks on Second street years ago.

The company was unable to procure the city's consent to this proceeding so it waited until Mayor Powell was on a visit to St. Paul and on a fine Sunday morning about 1,000 men were put on the job and the tracks on Second street were laid before evening. When White Beaver, hastening back in answer to frantic telegraphing, arrived in La Crosse that night trains were running on the track on Second street.

Mayor Sorensen left yesterday for Neenah to attend the convention of the Wisconsin League of Municipalities. In his absence Alderman William Torrance is acting mayor and will be in charge of whatever move the city may make in the campaign.

The Official Record

An official summary of the facts leading up to the destruction of the bridge, taken from the rate commission's report on the subject and the city records, follows:

The destroyed viaduct was built upon an agreement whereby the railroad built the bridge proper, and the city built and maintained the approaches and planking and assumed responsibility to abutting property holders.

The rate commission's decision, 1909, excluding the street car company from participation in the expense, pro-rated the cost between the city and railroad, excluding the street car company from participation in the expense on the ground that their expense for changing their tracks was their just share of the cost. The decision seems to have been based upon the contract affecting the old viaduct.

The city debated the question at that time only by filing with the commission a copy of a council resolution protesting against payment of any part of the expense by the city.

At the beginning of the present Sorensen administration the mayor, city engineer and city attorney visited the commission to ask if the case might be reopened, the time for appeal having elapsed under a former administration. The commission held that so doubtful was the safety of the bridge for heavy traffic that it would permit further consideration of the case only upon condition that the city close the viaduct to all traffic, which was done.

Wanted to Reopen it

In the June council meeting Alderman Paul W. Mahoney, attorney here for the railroad, but acting on behalf of the Progressive League, asked for information as to what was being done, and was told that the commission had promised several months previously to send an engineer to La Crosse, that stress of business had delayed his appearance here but that the engineer was expected shortly.

Mr. Mahoney then offered a resolution reciting that the bridge was safe and asking that the bridge be reopened. After opposition by Alderman B. C. Smith this was defeated, pending investigation by the state engineer.

In taking its action yesterday the railroad gave no notice either to the city or to the rate commission, citing the alleged dangerous condition of the bridge as their warrant for acting. No explanation as to why it was done in the night was forthcoming. By appointment the state engineer was to have arrived next week.

That the city will take advantage of the unusual procedure by the company to throw the entire responsibility for a new viaduct upon the company is presumed to be the fact.

MODERN FLAT SPRINGS A LEAK

The "Modern Flat" one of the number of motor boats in the fleet of the Owl club that held a picnic at the Owl club house, yesterday sprung a leak while running a race with the "Serpent" and would probably have gone to the bottom had it not been for the competitive boat coming to their assistance. The two boats were tearing over the finish line, the "Serpent" a little in the lead when the crew of the "Modern Flat" noticed that water was rapidly gaining in the bottom of their boat.

BLAMES OFFICIALS FOR I.W.W. ATTACK

Dr. Houck in Letter to Congressman Esch Alleges Plot Against Socialists in U. S. Service

In an open letter to Representative John J. Esch, Dr. Oscar Houck, prominent socialist of this city, lays the blame of the attack on I. W. W. and socialist headquarters in Seattle Friday night upon "higher officials." He declares that the soldiers and sailors in the crowd that caused the damage acted with the permission and at the instigation of their superiors. Dr. Houck alleges a plot to persecute socialists in the army and navy, and calls upon Mr. Esch to declare if "servants of the people, such as Secretary Daniels, have any right to prescribe the politics of citizens of the country." Dr. Houck's letter is as follows:

"La Crosse, Wis., July 19, 1913. "John J. Esch, "Congressman, 7th Dist. Wis. "Dear Sir:

"The Appeal to Reason received Friday, July 18th, very prophetically describes how the army and navy officials are very actively engaged in suppressing socialism by persistently persecuting and prosecuting the soldiers and sailors who dare to sympathize with or even mention socialism.

"Tonight's paper, July 19th, brings the news from Seattle of a riot by sailors and marines from the U. S. men of war belong to the Reserve Fleet, in which the sailors sacked and burned everything they could lay their hands on belonging to socialists and I. W. W., property amounting to about $6000.00. The officers in the meantime attended a dance and profess innocent ignorance of the occurrence, but in the light of events described in the Appeal to Reason, anybody can easily understand that this attack has been planned and executed by permission and instigation from higher officials. Secretary of the Navy Daniels was in Seattle and had, the day before relieved himself of one of his inciting speeches against socialism.

"This was published in The Times, by its owner, Mr. Blethen, a man of the stamp of Gray Otis of the Los Angeles Times. As a socialist, I respectfully ask you to inform the readers of this paper if servants of the people, such as Secretary Daniels and the officers of the army and navy have any right to prescribe the politics of the citizens of this country, as I suppose, soldiers are citizens, although they have been deprived of their rights as such which are conferred on them by the constitution of the United States. Kindly also inform them if free speech and assembly are guaranteed to all by this same constitution.

"Suppose, for argument's sake, that the socialists instead of these incited and duped soldiers had broken into the army posts and sacked and burned, what would have happened? Can you imagine the result?

"Unless an investigation is made of this awful plot which the officials of the army and navy stand accused of by the Appeal to Reason, the result is incalculable. Remember, that that paper has never printed any accusation which it could not prove, and that in spite of having been persecuted and prosecuted by a very unfriendly government, which has done all in its power to kill it; yet it is very much alive and speaks every week to millions of people, although it has only about half a million subscribers.

"Hoping that you will do your very best in this serious matter, I remain,

"Yours truly,

"OSCAR HOUCK."

RULES AGAINST SUNDAY SESSION

Attorney General Owen in Response to Morris' Request Says it Would Be "Shocking"

MADISON, Wis., July 21.—The senate did not meet yesterday. Attorney General Walter Owen Saturday afternoon ruled that such a thing would be "shocking to the public sense of propriety," and although sanctioned by precedent, he declares that, in the lack of explicit instructions, "the senate stood adjourned until the next secular day," or Monday.

This ended a most peculiar and embarrassing situation in the senate. Under the rules of the call of the house, which stood when the senate adjourned Saturday noon, it was possible only to adjourn under the rule which provided that the house meet at 10 o'clock the following day. This being Sunday, Lieutenant Governor Morris immediately appealed to the attorney general for an opinion as to whether the house was to meet on Sunday. The attorney general said:

"There seems to be sufficient precedent to the effect that the senate might hold a session and transact business on Sunday, if it so desired. I think, however, that in this state such a thing has never occurred, and to hold a session of the senate on Sunday would be contrary to all precedent, custom and usage and shocking to the public sense of propriety. While, as above stated, there seems to be precedent for the right and authority of the senate to hold a Sunday session, yet, no presumption that a Sunday session is intended should be indulged and, in my opinion, to bring about a Sunday session, a plain, unequivocal expression upon the part of the senate would be required. In the absence of such plain affirmative expression of the senate the universal custom and usage should be followed, and I have no hesitancy in saying that, under the circumstances stated in your letter, the senate stood adjourned until the next secular day, which is Monday."

Twenty delegates were present from surrounding cities, representing different brewery concerns. In the early part of the day the twenty delegates and a party from this city made an automobile trip to Bangor, where they were entertained by the Hussa Brewing company of that city. THOUGHTS AND THE MAN.

Thoughts make the man. Habitual thinking determines the character. And thoughts may be as fatal as crime to the development of a lofty manhood. Regulate your thoughts and you regulate the direction and the measure of your growth. Think of sinful gains and sinful pleasures and your character will lose its warmth and color. Think of duty, righteousness and God, and the beauty of holiness will be reflected in your face.—L. Sander Reed.

Three Great Athletes Who Retained Their Titles at National Championship Meet

Carroll B. Haff of the University of Michigan, Dan Ahne of the Illinois, A. C., and A. M. Richards of Brigham Young University, Utah went into the "Nationals" with great reputation and came through the big competitions still possessing them.

The company was mostly medical, and a little discussion arose about the conduct of another doctor who always had afternoon tea served to patients who called between 2 and 5. Foreign Markets

New York Stocks
NEW YORK, July 21.—The stock market opened quiet and higher. 11 a. m.—Though the market was not active, its strength was apparent during the first hour. Chicago Grain Review

CHICAGO, July 21.—Wheat opened today with an advance of 1-4c over yesterday's close and then made further gains of 1-4c in the forenoon. Liverpool cables supported the market; there was a private report of black rust in the Dakotas and the political situation in Europe encouraged support.

Corn prices ruled strong. At noon July was 7-8c and September 1c over last week's close in a market of light offerings. Sellers fear a return of the extreme hot weather in the southwest.

The advance in corn caused considerable covering in the oats pit and after a firm opening each month advanced to a point 3-4c above Saturday's closing.

Provisions were weak at the outset with the easier hog market but a good local demand caused a recovery to about last week's closing prices.

Wheat and oats maintained their morning gains in the afternoon, and corn made further fractional advances. The grain list closed strong and at about top-notch prices.

Provisions made slight additional gains in the afternoon.

100 TAKE TESTS TWELVE SUCCEED

Hood Street Playfield Has Largest Number of Boys Who Win Badges

The initial day of the badge test of the La Crosse playgrounds saw practically one hundred lads taking the first test of physical efficiency.

Only one boy qualified in the three events on the north side ground out of fifty who participated, while on the south side the boys fared better, there being eight boys of the Hood street playfield who won their badges and three from West Avenue.

The best time made in the sixty yard dash was made by "Tuffie" Rogstad of the Hood street ground who covered the space in seven and four-fifths seconds. Rogstad, who won the fifty yard dash last Saturday at the inter-playground meet is a fine sprinter and will make some of the lads hustle for first honors at the second meet held at the high school next Saturday.

In the standing broad jump, Russell Rippe, also of the Hood street ground, did the best, jumping six feet nine inches, just one foot over the mark necessary to make to come up to the standard in the test.

Interest was high on all the playgrounds and there is no doubt that this type of playground work will prove very popular and will be made a part of the regular work.

Those who won their badges for the first test follows:

Copeland Park—Emmanuel Brinkman.

Hood Street—Clarence Rogstad; Russell Rippe, Charles Padesky, William Temp, Rudie Temp, Jean Crider, Harry Nelson and Fred Hefti.

West Ave.—Ginsky, Jansky, Kuba.

The Test

Pull up (chinning), 4 times.

Standing broad jump, 5 ft 9 in.

60 yard dash, 8 3-5 seconds.
